A counterfeit of the five-dollar United States silver certificate, series of 1890, was forwarded a few days ago to the secret service bureau at the treasury department from Chicago. It was the first which had been received since last January, and experts declared it is a clever piece of work, which would not be detected as a counterfeit except under close scrutiny. It had a number of points about it which stamp it as being spurious, but which would not be noticed in the least by the laity.

"I had been expecting this note to turn up for a long time," said Chief Hazen, of the secret service bureau, to a Star reporter the other day, as he showed the counterfeit note across the table to be examined by the reporter. "I am rather surprised that we have not secured it before."

"It comes from Chicago, and from certain ear marks which I can detect about it it is the work of a noted counterfeiter by the name of John Alfred L'Koog. L'Koog is a Swede, about 35 years of age, and rather clever as a note maker. He escaped from Joliet prison, Illinois, last March, where he had been sent from Chicago for counterfeiting, with two other men. They were coin makers, named Jacob Johnson and James Foley. They were recaptured and returned to the prison, but so far L'Koog has eluded the watchfulness of the officers."

"Ever since his escape we have been looking out for some of his work, and it has just turned up. When a man has started in the business he never quits it, unless by force of circumstances."

"It was only reasonable to suppose that L'Koog would return to his old haunts and occupation in Chicago, and the supposition proved correct."

"The last counterfeit note we received was from Chicago, also. It was a $20 Manning head certificate, and turned up January 11. The windy city is a center for counterfeiting, as the workers have often been captured there."

The chief sat in his private office in the treasury building, about which clings an air of mystery connected with everything pertaining to the secret service. On the walls were pictures of famous makers and shovers of "the queer," more were held in cabinets, and records, which if revealed would cause sensations throughout the United States, were hidden in boxes and carefully filed away.

"Counterfeiting might be termed the aristocracy of crooks. They are generally quiet, not often immoral or convivial, and are naturally very reserved. It is to their interest to be reticent. It is a paradox, but there are never thieves among them. What I mean is, while they follow counterfeiting, which is one of the worst crimes imaginable, they would not rob or burglarize. Many of them have been known to be exceedingly charitable, though it may be said if they are successful they can easily afford to be so. They are a milder class than that of any other criminals. They never cause trouble in any community wherever they may happen to be, outside of the counterfeiting."

"There are not so many women in the business as formerly; why, cannot just be explained. There are few females in it now, and those who are engaged in the business cooperate with their husbands. The man generally makes the money, and the woman passes it, as she does not find so much trouble in doing so."

"There is more coining of the queer in the west and southwest sections of the country than in the others. It probably started there and has continued. It is transmitted from father to son, just like any other trade, and flourishes in much the same manner as does illicit distilling."

"It is a mistaken idea to suppose that counterfeitters, as has been stated, buy silver and make it into coin, thereby gaining the profit which the stamp is supposed to add to it. Not by any means. A counterfeiter will not pay 60 cents or 62 cents an ounce for silver to use when he can get the same results differently. He buys antimony, tin, plaster of paris, and other materials, the whole outfit costing about $1.50. With these he can get out coin to the face value of $200 or $300. They wish to make as much as possible out of as little as possible."

"We recognize the work of individual coin counterfeitters by the manner in which the coins are finished, as to the milling on the edges, and other details. It is very seldom that we are mistaken in this respect. Every one has his own mark."—Washington Star.

THE TACTICS OF 1873.

No less a personage than Hon. William E. Chandler, United States Senator from New Hampshire, complains that certain clauses of the new tariff bill were surreptitiously incorporated as were those eliminating the silver dollar and demonetizing silver in the act of 1873. Mr. Chandler, in a letter to the Boston Herald, says the clause in the new tariff bill imposing ten per cent extra duty on all foreign products coming into the United States through Canada was written in the bill as now matter by the Conference Committee by which means it was adopted by both Houses of Congress without being noticed by any of the members except those engaged in the scheme. Senator Chandler points out that the Conference Committee went beyond its powers when it inserted this important amendment into a clause of the law, but it is there, nevertheless, and it cannot be eliminated except Congress is convened in special session to amend the act.

Mr. Chandler says that Senator Cannon in open session of the Senate asked whether the Conference Committee intended to do anything but settle the differences between the two houses and put no new matter in the bill, and Senator Allison replied emphatically that of course the committee did not.

It appears that the schemers in Congress are using the same tactics that they did in 1873. Then Senator Sherman, who had charge of the mint bill, in reply to a question by Senator Stewart, said the bill did not change the coinage laws, but related exclusively to mint matters. President Grant, who approved the bill, did not know that it demonetized silver, yet when the act appeared in the statutes the little joker was there and the mints were closed against silver, and one of the money metals of the Constitution was stricken down in the house of its friends. All efforts to test the constitutionality of that act in the Supreme Court have failed. A bar of silver of the requisite weight and fineness was presented by Denver men at the Philadelphia mint for coinage. The superintendent of the mint in accordance with the instructions of Charles Foster, then Secretary of the Treasury, refused to coin the silver. Proceedings were commenced in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia and Mr. Foster was cited to appear and show cause why he did not order the bullion coined. That was near the close of President Harrison's administration and Secretary Foster resigned rather than appear in court.

It has been asserted by prominent lawyers that the act of 1873 excluding silver from coinage at the mints is unconstitutional and that it is not in the power of Congress to demonetize one of the metals which when coined the Constitution makes a legal tender for all debts.

PENNSYLVANIA SILVER MEN

The Pennsylvania Democratic convention assembled at Reading, 435 delegates being in attendance. The Gold Democrats, better known as Mr. Hanna's auxiliaries, attempted to get control of the organization, but the silver sentiment was too pronounced and the Democrats for revenue only were routed, horse, foot and dragons. Congressman Ernestout presided, and when he mentioned the name of W. J. Bryan delegates and spectators stood in their chairs and waved hats and handkerchiefs as they cheered for the great leader.

The financial plank of the platform shows that the Pennsylvanians are recovering their senses and are now as much in favor of free coinage as the most enthusiastic advocates of the restoration of silver could desire. Here is the resolution in full:

We, the Democrats of Pennsylvania, in convention assembled, heartily reaffirm and reiterate the principles of the Democratic party expressed in the platform made by the National Convention at Chicago in 1896, and approved by 6,500,000 free and independent voters. We are firmly and unalterably opposed to the single gold standard, which has been the direct cause of the financial distress that has followed upon our people since its adoption, and we are in favor of an immediate return to our original specie basis, as it existed prior to the demonetization Act of 1873.

What better proof could be adduced than this? Two short years ago not a State convention, Democratic or Republican, east of the Ohio, would make such a clear, unequivocal declaration for free coinage as that. Now the great State of Pennsylvania joins hands with the great West in demanding the restoration of silver and denouncing the crime of 1873. The world moves and right will prevail in the end. The tens of thousands of coal miners who voted to fasten the fetters of the gold trust on the country last November have had an object lesson they will not forget and will, doubtless, be arrayed on the side of humanity and free coinage at the next election. The "fifty-cent" dollar bugaboo has ceased to terrify them when they see a disk of silver, the market value of which, in consequence of the conspiracy to depreciate it, is only 48 cents, sought for with eagerness by everybody in the country and taken for 100 cents when stamped in the United States Mint, fully disproving the goldbug falsehood that the legal tender power of a United States coin is determined by the market value of the metal of which it is made.

The waves of prosperity are increasing in the East, and Mr. Hanna and his hired men are still jubilant as silver is on the decline. There are over three hundred thousand coal mines, many of them starving, demanding living wages, two thousand cloak makers in New York in the same condition, and twelve hundred trousers makers in Philadelphia on a strike for better pay. But Mr. Hanna's subsidized press tell us that the country is prosperous and that it would be ruinous to restore the money of the Constitution.

TELEGRAPHIC NOTES.

A heavy windstorm raged at Indianapolis yesterday afternoon, blowing at the rate of sixty-five miles an hour. The damage was not reported.

The delegates of the Letter Carriers Association, the annual convention of which meets at San Francisco on the 6th instant, will travel by special train over the Rock Island and Colorado Midland. The low rates have been opened to the public.

A harmonious fusion of the three silver parties in Nebraska has been effected. The Populists urge Judge Neville for Supreme Judge, but his followers are willing to give away to effect a fusion and take someone else. Populists, Democrats and Republicans all mingle.

Martha M. Craven, daughter of the claimant to a portion of the Fairstate, was married yesterday morning to Henry Koehler, a St. Louis brewer. The marriage took place at San Francisco and was private. Miss Craven had attained some notoriety as an actress on the coast.

The negroes residing in Elwood, Indiana, have been warned to leave the town and serious trouble is anticipated. For several years past colored people have tried to establish a residence in Elwood, but have as often been driven away. Two months ago a colony of fifty arrived at the place with the determination to remain at all hazard.

The probable settlement of the strike has created considerable speculation among the miners and the operators. President Hatchford has denied the report that he had made a proposition to the operators. A proposition has been made by Thomas E. Young, representative of the M. A. Hanna interests but not accepted as yet.

At the meeting of the Brown University Corporation at Providence, R. I., yesterday, a letter from ex-Secretary of State Richard Olney was read. The letter sets forth the objections of the ex-Secretary to the action of the corporation as regards President Andrews' views on the silver question. Mr. Olney in a few pointed sentences gives his opinion of the action of the Brown University Corporation concerning Dr. Andrews. The corporation has seen its folly and has voted to request Dr. Andrews to withdraw his resignation.

The leading shippers of Pittsburgh deny emphatically that Young has any authority to represent them and the offer of 64 cents per ton is higher than they are willing to pay. Hatchford's proposition of 69 cents, 5 cents of which is to be retained until a decision has been given by the board of arbitration, is said to be satisfactory. It is believed that a settlement of some kind will be made shortly. A general meeting has been arranged at which it is expected the shippers will be present and efforts will be made to end the strike without resorting to the severe measure proposed by some of the large operators.

Plain Pastry.

Having everything ice-cold, and measured ready, put on the board three cups of flour, and mix through it thoroughly, without using the hands, a teaspoonful each of fine salt and sugar. Pile the flour in a heap, and make a well in the center, and put in one cupful of butter. With a sharp silver knife cut the butter in little pieces, and gradually mix with the flour. When well incorporated, add a little at a time, about a cupful of ice water, or as much as needed to make the paste so that you can lift it from the board with the knife; lift from the board, redredge with flour, and return, and roll lightly, with only the weight of the rolling-pin, from you, into a thin sheet. Fold from you, and roll again, always in the same direction; repeat, and turn in the edges, and roll up into a tight roll, and lay away on the ice for at least a day to ripen. This should be baked in an oven at about 400 degrees Fahr. When ready to use cut off the end of the pastry roll and slice large enough to make the cover required. A little practice will enable you to so gauge this that there will be no trimmings left, and practice will give you skill to roll the covers out that you can roll them nice and round. The time used in making this pastry should not be over five minutes. —Washington Home Magazine.

HINTS HERE AND THERE.

A Tip in Time Saves Worry and Waste
—Utilizing Old Lace Curtains.

If women staying at seashore resorts will spend part of their time in collecting a variety of shells they may utilize them in the fall for a unique door drapery. Fasten the shells thickly on fish netting, then drape the netting over a door casing and let it hang down at the sides. The shell-trimmed netting also makes an attractive portiere by lining it with a light shade of sea green silk-finished material.

Green mosses gathered in the woods for winter use have a way of losing their color and turning brown as they become dry. If the moss is first well cleansed in clear water and then soaked a short time in water made almost black with bluing it will brighten in color when dried. Spread the wet moss upon papers or an old tray and let it dry in the air, but not where the sun will strike it.

One of the best cosmetics for bicycle riders or persons upon the water is fresh cucumber juice. This will aid in keeping the skin of the face soft and smooth. To extract the juice from a cucumber, first peel it, and then cut it into thick slices and press the juice out with a lemon squeezer. A simple and harmless remedy for sunburn is to bathe the face in buttermilk.

The suggestion of a last summer's camper to add a few sheets of the sticky fly paper to the outfit may be worth repeating. The paper, he says, proved a veritable boon in the woods, where gnats, flies, and mosquitoes were abundant. This flypaper has been known to catch flies, roaches, mice, and only recently accounts were seen of the entrapment of a rat on its gummy surface.

The washing of fine silk or lisle-thread hosiery should not be entrusted to the general laundress without some supervision. They should be washed quickly in warm salt water made rather soapy. No soap should be rubbed on the stockings. They are then thoroughly rinsed in several clear waters and dried on the back of a chair, or on a towel rack out of the sun. Put a thick towel over chair or rack first, as this absorbs the moisture while they are drying and prevents streaking. They should not be ironed, but pulled into shape when about dry. Many housekeepers have the wooden stocking forms to stretch such fine hosiery over as the final drying is accomplished.

The entrance hall of a bare-looking country house, which was one of the deserted farmhouses common nowadays, was made attractive last summer by an improvised dado of daisies. These grew in great profusion in the fields, and were arranged along each side of the hall in common red clay half tiles, in the bottom of which cheap pint basins had been fitted to hold the water. —Chicago Inter Ocean.

By Deserving It.

If we deserve sympathy, we are pretty sure of getting it by courageously and quietly showing that we are deserving; we cannot have it by demanding it with whines and lamentations, and demonstrations of our suffering forced upon unwilling ears. —Detroit Free Press.

Trying Again.

"Papa," said the ice baron's beautiful daughter, "mamma and I want $5,000 for charitable purposes. Can you let us have it?"
"I suppose so, my dear," said the indulgent parent, "but isn't that quite a large sum for charity? What disposition do you intend to make of it?"
"You remember," said the fair girl, "the younger son of that English duke who will inherit the title and estates of his father, and who was so attentive to me last summer?"
"I do," said the ice baron. "Is he trying to borrow money already?"
"No, indeed; he has returned home without proposing, and mamma and I have decided to go to a summer resort for the purpose of securing another."
"And where does the charity come in?"
"Oh, the money, you know, is to be used as a fresh heir fund."

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT

A Comparison of American and English Systems.

The recent action taken against the Board of Supervisors of the City and County of San Francisco, the scandals which are so frequently brought to light, and the complaints which are so constantly recurrent in connection with American city government, has led the writer to believe that a series of articles on the municipal administration of English type cities would not be without interest to the people of the West. It is deemed an irrefutable argument, when one impugns the condition of our American cities and upholds the condition in foreign municipalities as models to be emulated and adopted, to exclaim, that the conditions and environments of this country are so totally different from those of any other that they of necessity preclude the trial of any other systems than those which are indigenous to the soil and have grown up and prospered as the American people have expanded.

That our conditions and environments are dissimilar is true. We live in a political atmosphere different from most nations. But that the problems and questions which now, or soon will confront our local institutions are different radically from those that have confronted other growing towns is an argument that has little validity and strength to support it. There are such questions as the governing body, Health and Street departments, Gas and Water rates, Railroad franchises and privileges and a multitude of others of municipal interest, that must be grappled with and settled by one and all. And so, if we would be modern and up to date in our city governments and desirous of advancing and bettering the condition of city people, rich and poor alike, we must be wide-awake and watchful. Scrutinize carefully the undertakings and operations of sister cities. Watch them well and see if they work in practice as in theory and when satisfied draw your conclusions and do not hesitate to put them to test. It is only when this spirit has been infused—this spirit of the greatest good for the greatest number, of public rather than private benefit, for general rather than individual gain, that we may begin to hope for perfect municipal government. Till then we must, preface, sit by and suffer our cities to remain in their degraded condition, chained hand and foot to the party boss, the grab bag of every petty official, liable at every turn to the plunder and pillage of a horde of freebooters utterly corrupt, devoid of principle and entirely bereft of conscience—a scummy batch of political outcasts.

It is like coming from an opium den into the open air to learn from a consideration of American municipal conditions to those of our mother country across the waters. Here everything is order and satisfaction. There are no petty peculations, no party fraud and boss favoritism and yet the English people have never been accused of having fewer privileges and less freedom than we on this side of the Atlantic.

I have chosen for consideration the city of Glasgow as not only being a type but as illustrating the struggle and development of a small town under unfavorable circumstances into a metropolis second only to London in population and the peer of any in the British Empire in the breadth and scope of its municipal operations. Many years ago Glasgow started out on the huculean task of making herself a center of trade and commerce by deepening and widening into a harbor and ocean highway the shallow river that ran through its limits. With this improvement of the Clyde came an enormous trade from America, the India and other countries and when coal and iron mines were developed in the immediate vicinity Glasgow was already far on the road to metropolitan greatness. Naturally this enormous increase in population brought with it numberless questions as to housing, water and food supplies, health, hygiene and others of equal importance. Each had to be met and the manner in which they were overcome furnishes an abundance of facts and figures for the edification of the cities of the world, to say nothing of the example set to all and the impetus given to municipal operations. The mode alone by which the inadequate and impure water supply of the city was supplanted by a system of great efficiency and a supply of absolute purity is itself a story worthy of mention. But with this and other facts a future article will deal.

JULE SARTIN.

Another Delay.

The military court that was to have met at Virginia on Tuesday evening to try Lieutenant Morgan on a charge of insubordination adjourned on account of not having a quorum present. The chairman is authorized to call a meeting of the court, but it is not probable that it will meet again until the matter of whether Major Huffer is to appear before the military court as Lieutenant Morgan's counsel, has been decided by the Supreme Court.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK

THE REPUBLICAN STATE.

The sacrifices of the ATHER of Hannan Next Year.

VIRGINIA CITY, Nev., August 30, 1897.

Editor Silver State:—Since the reported interview with Senator Stewart has been exploded to the great chagrin and mortification of Hanna's puppets in this State and they have found out that they can't pull Hanna's leg as they expected and as two of their most prominent leaders tried to do in the last campaign, they have concluded to keep up their organization and courage by whistling as they pass through the political graveyard of the Republican party in Nevada. I have it from the most reliable source, that is as reliable as anything can be that comes from the goldbug wing of that party, that the manipulators of that clan have practically agreed on the following ticket for next year:

U. S. Senator, R. L. Fulton of Washoe; Congressman, William McMillan of Storey; Governor, W. W. Williams of Churchill; Lieutenant Governor, J. A. Yerington of Esmeralda; Secretary of State, P. D. Vanderleith of Ormsby; Controller, W. S. Beard of Esmeralda; Treasurer, G. W. Richards of Ormsby; Surveyor General, L. H. Taylor of Lander; Attorney General, O. H. Grey of White Pine; Superintendent of Public Instruction, Orvis Ring of Washoe; Supreme Justice, William Bonfield of Humboldt; State Printer, A. C. Bragg of Washoe.

I asked my informant what their object was in putting up a ticket when he knew there was no show of their electing? He said waves of prosperity come from such unexpected sources that they concluded to let the father of prosperity know where the party was at in Nevada, and that a political wave might strike it next year and they might make a Klondike haul in this State yet out of party patronage. I am assured that the above ticket will be named next year, except there may be a change in two of the names, as two of the above named gentlemen had not been consulted as yet. All the balance have said, "Barkis is willin'."

Yours truly,

NEVADAN.

Some Glaring Inconsistencies.

Some of the inconsistent statements of the Examiner's special writers sent into the Klondike country can be summed up in the following: Old Joaquin Miller writes about wading through snowbanks waist deep and in the next paragraph tells about primroses and wild strawberries that he picked while en route. Then he will scratch out something about a purling brook and switch off on an ice-bound river and yet he had only traveled a short distance up the Chilkoot Pass. Another Examiner correspondent tells about it raining incessantly since he has been in Alaska and that the thermometer was 40 degrees below zero all of the time.

These are only a few of the ridiculous things that have been published, but they are a fair sample of the rot which is claimed to have been written in the great Northwest, but which was more probably worked up in an upstairs office of the Examiner building.

Prospecting in Grizzly Valley.

Doc Trumbull, an old timer in Plumas county, claims to have struck a fine prospect about four miles from Lovejoy's in Grizzly Valley. Doc says it is rich in gold and he believes he has found a fortune. He is working on the prospect at present and will continue work until snow drives him out. Mining is looking up in and around Grizzly, so Doc says, and things are looking brighter for next season. A number of claims have been taken up and work is being pushed upon them. It is late now for any great development work, for the cold and storms will soon drive prospectors out of the mountains, but a start will be made and next season several good mines will be opened up in that vicinity.

Inquisitive.

The Republican editors of the state are giving H. M. Yerington, superintendent of the Virginia & Truckee railroad, a good deal of taffy in their papers. What are they up to? Are they grooming the old man for the Senatorial race?—Elko Independent.

NATIONAL GAMES.

Antiquity of Many of Modern Times.

Poker Played in Persia in Ancient Times—Indians had "Layonts" Before Columbus Landed in America.

Mr. Stewart Culin, director of the Museum of Archaeology and Paleontology of the University of Pennsylvania, whose advance articles on the work he is compiling on the games of the world has attracted so much attention, has been spending a few days at the National Museum in pursuit of his studies. For the past eight years Director Culin has been collecting data and specimens of games which are played by all the nations of the world, and has also made up complete a collection as possible of specimens extant of the games played by the most ancient peoples.

"Games generally," said Mr. Culin, "are remarkable for their similarity, which extends practically to identity, in all parts of the earth, in all times and among people of the highest and the lowest culture. Any influences in reference to the contact of races and migrations must be made with extreme caution, as we find pretty much the same games everywhere. The games of amusement played at the present day by civilized people are clearly survivals of divinitary rites, this fact being shown by the position which all games occupy among the people whom we call savages. The more complicated games, such as playing cards, appear to have direct relations with the divinitary calendar. And the counting boards or cables, upon which pieces of wood are moved, as in backgammon or chess, have similar relations."

"The collection shown at Atlanta, while occupying a great deal of space and apparently diversified in character, merely represented an attempt to illustrate the development of two types of games which are represented to-day by playing cards and chess. In the course of these investigations it is shown that in a sense playing cards in one form or another are practically universal, and were known to many of the tribes of the American continent antedating the discovery. Their most highly artistic form occurs in the gambling sticks of the Indians of our northwest coast. These gambling sticks, it is demonstrated, were derived from arrow shaftments marked with emblems of place and personality."

"The cards of northeast Asia, such as are used in Corea, rest of our northwest coast. These gambling sticks, it is demonstrated, were derived from arrow shaftments marked with emblems of place and personality."

"The cards of northeast Asia, such as are used in Corea, rest of our northwest coast. These gambling sticks, it is demonstrated, were derived from arrow shaftments marked with emblems of place and personality."

Gen. A. Houton-Schindler, of Teheran, in reply to a letter of inquiry, has furnished the following account of the Persian game: The game is called "As," and is exactly like poker, but without any flushes or sequences. There are four players and each player gets five cards, dealt to the right. The dealer puts down a stake. The first player then looks at his cards, if he "goes," he says "di dam" (I have seen), and he covers the stake or raises it. If he does not wish to play he says "Nadi dam" (I have not seen), and throws away his cards.

He may also "go" without looking at his cards, that is, in poker parlance, "straddles," and says "Nadi di dam" (not seeing, I have seen). The second player, if he wishes to play, must cover the stake, and can also raise. The third player and the dealer then act in the same way, just as in poker, and when the stakes of all players are equal and no one raises any more, the cards are turned up and the player holding the best hand wins the stake. The hands in the order of their value are three of a kind and a pair, a "high" (three, ace king, etc., two pair, aces highest; one pair, aces highest. When two players have the same pair of aces, the other cards decide. For instance, a pair of aces, ace, soldier, and some card of little value. Bluffing is a feature of the game and is called "adam," literally, "Fire off a gun."

Backgammon is one of the few classical games to which the present day attains. It is extremely interesting from the fact that it is identical with the Roman game, dice being cast from a dice box into a little tower, the Turicula of the classical writers. In the museum a backgammon board is shown from the Malay peninsula, which is used in a game identical with our own. A Syrian specimen is beautifully inlaid with mother-of-pearl.

"Modern ingenuity," said Mr. Culin, "cannot be said to have risen to the point of inventing a game. All games were invented ages and ages ago, and it is to be questioned whether a single application for a patent upon the idea of a game would be granted in our patent office were the history of primitive games fully known and accessible."

Stenographers Quarrel Over Fees.

Miss Georgia Johnson and Mrs. Fisher two lady stenographers, have had a difference in the division of fees in the Foley and other cases, which necessitated a resort to the courts to settle. The case was tried before a Carson jury and Miss Johnson won, and Mrs. Fisher was ordered to pay over the fees Miss Johnson claimed.
